Chemsultants International announces promotions for Dr. Berry Decker and Cheryl Saqqa

Chemsultants International is pleased to announce the promotions of Dr. Berry Decker to Technical Project Manager and Cheryl Saqqa to Testing Project Leader.

Dr. Decker began her career at Chemsultants in 2007, working in the area of fuel cell membrane development. Over the past 3 years, Berry has also made significant contributions to completing projects in medical and industrial product applications, from the idea stage to full commercialization. In her new role as Technical Project Manager, Berry will have responsibility for working with and leading other Chemsultants development staff to manage all product development projects.

Cheryl Saqqa joined Chemsultants in 1991 as a Laboratory Technician. Since 1991 Cheryl has worked on diverse product testing projects including custom test method development. She has also contributed on product development projects, contract manufacturing QA, and the transition of new products from the Chemsultants lab through pilot scale up to manufacturing. In her new role, Cheryl will be responsible for planning, resource allocation and completion of testing projects, as well as testing support for new product development projects.
